The years 2008 and 2009 will be remembered for one of the worst financial and economic crises and the strongest drop in international trade since 1945. According to the WTO, global trade exchanges are now expected to grow by 9.5 percent in 2010. Can trade and investment act as levers for an economic upturn? Can such growth be long-lasting? Will the United States and Europe offer clear leadership within the Doha round of negotiations? How will a balanced dialogue with China, Brazil and India be established? Can trade and investments act as levers for an economic upturn, with regards to a reform of governance rules in force in the international arena?

Mr. Gutierrez, former U.S. secretary of commerce, will discuss these themes, as well as the major changes in the world economy during the past few years. The conversation will be moderated by Prof. Patrick Messerlin, director of Le Groupe d'Économie Mondiale.
